LEADERSHIP IN GLOBAL HEALTH FELLOWSHIP

THE MISSION

Emerging pandemic infections, the dramatic rise in non-communicable diseases, planetary health, and other issues will be at the forefront of complex global health challenges in the next decade. To meet these challenges, YIGH aims to contribute to the development of future global health leadership by training aspiring young professionals who have a wide-ranging passion for and understanding of the critical importance of good health for a just and equitable society. The Leadership in Global Health Fellowship will prepare the future generation of global health professionals through a comprehensive program that includes placement in a high-impact internship and participation in a leadership development practicum. The program is a partnership between the Yale Institute for Global Health, the Global Health Studies Program at the Jackson School for International Affairs, and the Yale School of Public Health Office of Career Services.

THE PROGRAM

YIGH will select Yale students and trainees from across campus to participate in a high-impact internship. Past placements have included GAVI, Save the Children, UNICEF, UNDP, and the World Bank. To prepare for the internship and throughout the experience, Fellows will participate in a leadership development practicum which will be centered on a relational framework of leadership, understanding it as a dynamic role within an organization. Fellows will discuss the relationship between leaders and followers, how to work across groups and hierarchy, and how to resolve conflict in organizations to build global partnerships founded on shared goals for quality health care and population health outcomes. Applications for the program will open on Tuesday, January 17, 2023. Applications must be submitted by 9AM on Tuesday, January 31, 2023.

FUNDING

In partnership with the Global Health Studies Program and the YSPH Office of Career Services, YIGH will support costs for the program including travel, lodging, and other expenses. Each Fellow will prepare a budget to support their summer placement.
